

Table of contents

Foreword	11
Acknowledgements	13
List of illustrations	15
List of tables	19
CHAPTER 1
Cult denominations and the dilemma of Hellenistic royal deification: A methodological introduction	21
1.1. Searching for the big picture, focusing on the context	21
1.2. Cultic honours for human beings and the epicletic language of Greek religion	24
1.3. Becoming Theos : Reassessing the link between cultic honours and ontology	30
1.3.1. Ancient criticisms and modern issues	30
1.3.2. Different regards across genres, space, and time	35
1.4. From physis to timē : Status and the religious persona of a ruler	40
1.5. Mapping the syntax of compound denominations	48
1.5.1. God-to-god and human-to-god ritual associations as seen through cultic denominations	48
1.5.2. The bricks of compound denominations: Roots, qualifiers, epithets	55
1.6. Plan of the book	58

CHAPTER 2

Two-member denominations combining a royal name with a theonym	59
2.1. Overview of the evidence	59
2.2. Acting as king and queen: Harpalos and the religious honours for his hetairai	61
2.3. The religious toolkit of diplomacy: Demetrios' women and the role of Aphrodite in Athens	66
2.4. Reversing the onomastic sequence: Aphrodite followed by a royal personal name	71
2.5. Toponyms, sanctuaries, and altars: Aphrodite and queens in the Egyptian chora	76
2.6. Sexuality and marriage, diplomacy and war: The many faces of Aphrodite	83
2.7. Two-member denominations for Hellenistic kings and courtiers	90
2.7.1. The false case of Zeus Kassandros in Macedonia	91
2.7.2. Zeus Idrieus at Iasos	91
2.7.3. Zeus (Larasios) Eumenes in Tralleis	98
2.8. Menekrates Zeus and Herakles Themison: Court hierarchy and the appropriateness of compound denominations for royal friends	101
2.9. Concluding remarks	107

CHAPTER 3

Three-member and multiple denominations	109
3.1. Overview of the evidence	109
3.2. Three-member and multiple denominations with an anthroponym as root element	110
3.3. Category I: Anthroponym followed by an epithet and theonym (A-e ^A -T)	113
3.3.1. Arsinoe Philadelphos Naias at Chytroi, Cyprus	113
3.3.2. Arsinoe Philadelphos Isis on Alexandrian oinochoai	115
3.3.3. Agathe Tyche on Ptolemaic oinochoai : Diachronic change in the religious representation of Ptolemaic queens?	117
3.3.4. Antiochos (VI) Epiphanes Dionysos	122
3.3.5. Mithridates (VI) Eupator Dionysos	129
3.4. Category II: Reversed 'epithet + anthroponym' order (e ^A -A-T). Basilissa Arsinoe Kypris at Cape Zephyrion	136

3.5. Category III: Theonym embedded within an ‘anthroponym + epithet’ group (A-T-e ^A)	139
3.5.1. Seleukos Zeus Nikator and Antiochos Apollo Soter at Seleucia in Pieria	139
3.5.2. Multiple epithets: Antiochos (XII) Dionysos Epiphanes Philopator Kallinikos (A-T-e ^A)	155
3.5.3. Epicletic innovations under Kleopatra III (A-e ^A -T-e ^A)	156
3.6. Category IV: Reversed ‘epithet + anthroponym’ sequence with a nested theonym (e ^A -T-A)	161
3.6.1. Basilissa Aphrodite Laodike at Iasos	161
3.6.2. Chinese boxes: Theos Zeus Eleutherios Philopatris Theophanes at Mytilene (e ^A -T-e ^T -e ^A -A)	169
3.7. Three-member denominations with a theonym as root element (T-e ^T -A or T-A-e ^A)	175
3.7.1. Zeus Soter Hiero in Syracuse	176
3.7.2. Aphrodite Akraia Arsinoe at Cape Zephyrion	180
3.7.3. Isis Arsinoe Philadelphos at Kanopos and Halikarnassos	183
3.8. The beginnings of the ‘ Neos + theonym’ epithets (A-e ^{neos} -T)	186
3.8.1. Neos Dionysos	187
3.8.2. Nea Isis, Thea Neotera	194
3.9. Concluding remarks	198

CHAPTER 4

Divine anthropophoric epicleses based on royal personal names	201
4.1. Royal names turned into divine epicleses: From religion to honours, and back	201
4.2. Zeus Philippios in Eresos, 336 BC	202
4.3. Zeus Seleukeios and Zeus Antigona(i)os in Roman Lydia and Phrygia	208
4.4. Aphrodite Stratonikis in Smyrna, 246/5-244/3 BC	215
4.5. Apollo Pasparios in Pergamon	228
4.6. Meaning and failure of divine anthropophoric epicleses: The point of view of the Greek epicletic system	231

CHAPTER 5

Becoming Theos: The Hellenistic history of a deifying epithet	237
5.1. Purpose and challenges of mapping the diffusion of Theos	237
5.2. Alexander’s last years	240

5.2.1. Cultic honours for Alexander in Athens	240
5.2.2. Hephaestion as Theos Paredros	254
5.2.3. Alexander, Greek cities, and religious honours: Exploring similarities with Siwa, 332/1 BC	262
5.3. The Diadochi down to 280 BC	266
5.4. The reign of Ptolemy II as a turning point	274
5.5. Asia Minor and Egypt in the mid-3 rd century: From Ptolemies to Seleucids and the question of Antiochos II's epithet Theos	278
5.6. Consolidation of the tradition: The Attalids and their legacy	290
5.7. Theos and the divine epiphany of living rulers: From Ptolemy V to Antiochos IV	296
5.8. Kleopatra Thea Eueteria in Antiochia-Ptolemais-Ake	299
5.9. Coda: The late-Hellenistic East, and back to Teos	306
CHAPTER 6
Synthesis, general observations, and further perspectives	313
6.1. Reassessing the religious significance of compound denominations for Hellenistic rulers	313
6.2. Comparing different syntactic patterns and their religious meaning	314
6.3. The choice and position of deities in compound denominations	322
6.4. The point of view of different media	330
6.5. Mapping compound denominations through time and space	334
6.6. Compound denominations and rituals	337
6.7. Beyond epithets: Exploring similarities with iconography and court performances	344
6.8. What did cultic honours ever do for Greek religion?	346
Bibliography	353
Indexes
1. Index of denominations	395
2. Index of ancient sources	397
3. General index	400